

Gomes & Tubelis. Diet of the Roadside Hawk in Brazil

Appendix: Photographic records with evidence of feeding activities of the Roadside Hawk (Rupornis magnirostris), and obtained by citizen scientists in the Atlantic Forest and the Caatinga eco-regions, Brazil, between 2010 and 2021, and deposited in the WikiAves database, with information on the locality and date of records, the eco-region and period in which they occurred, and the type, class, and order of prey. Eco-region: AF = Atlantic Forest, CA = Caatinga. Prey type: Vert = Vertebrate, Invert = Invertebrate. Throughout the table, the sign “?” indicates that the identification of the prey was not possible. Records were listed by state, and gathered in the WikiAves database by TVG in February 2021.
