I would like to express my gratitude for your cooperation and providing an opportunity to learn much from you.

I have learned many things from the Journal which published articles and researches about the latest trends and achievements made in the field of nursing in various countries.

Also, I appreciate much since the Journal provides an opportunity to share and learn from each other on health care and services, application of modern nursing technology and new thinking which all these have been in great demand among population and require cross sectoral cooperation in countries.

For example, during this time I provided my own comments to every article of a descriptive study to assess the knowledge of labour workers regarding personal protective equipments in Baru Sahib, Distt Sirmour, Himachal Pradesh, usage of Internet for Academic Purposes on University Students' Achievement: A literature Review, The Patient in Intensive Care: Communication with the Critical Patient and his Family Members - A Narrative Review as a researcher and confidently say that I learnt many things through preparing my comments and opinions.

Nursing is a large component of the health care and services.

In the 64th session of WHO mentioned that nursing education of public health should be developed within the introduction of people centred health care and services.

Therefore, it is important to implement this requirement by developing nursing which meets population health needs and demand. Especially nursing care and services would be a great benefit if they are evidence based and included multifunctional measures. In this regard, the Journal would make a great contribution to identifying research priorities in nursing, developing important researches in health sector and educating nurses in research techniques and methodologies.

As we become part of Nursing & Healthcare International Journal, we are very happy to be educated and learning about population and evidence based and responsible care and service.

I have no doubt that the Nursing & Healthcare International Journal would make a significant contribution to making a evidence based clinical decision by providing research articles on health especially on the issues and challenges in nursing field.

In the future, I hope the Journal would also publish procedures and guidelines and discussions on health care and nursing. I believe that our cooperation would enhance in the future.
